Those Who Urge America to Remain Aloof From Affairs of Rest of World Are Called Unpatriotic

Need for Unity Shown

Relief for Depression Depends on International Movement, He Declares

America Has Part to Play

"It is also selfish for the American people to give this support because the widely prevailing economic disorganization, the unemployment of hundreds of thousands of able-bodied and willing men and women, the nation-wide depression and the severe financial problems which confront us day by day, can be satisfactorily dealt with only by speedily restoring the producing power and therefore the consuming power of Europe's millions. He who says that all this is no concern of ours is both blind and oblivious to the facts of History.

"America was not aloof from the rest of the world when, in 1776, Thomas Jefferson wrote into the opening paragraph of the Declaration of Independence that a decent respect was owed to the opinions of mankind; nor in 1778, when the Continental Congress ratified a treaty of alliance with France to which the signature of Benjamin Franklin was attached; nor when, in 1794, the Jay Treaty with Great Britain was concluded; nor again when, in 1796, George Washington wrote in his farewell address the injunction to observe good faith and justice toward all mations, to cultivate peace and harmony with all and to avoid inveterate antipathies against particular nations, as well as a passionate attachments with others; nor when, in 1801. Thomas Jefferson in his first inaugural address enjoined equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; nor when, in 1803-104. American naval forces under Preble and Decatur were taking active part in suppression of the Barbary pirates; nor when, in 1918, enthusiasm was aroused by the dramatic eloquence of Henry Clay on the floor of the House of Representatives on behalf of 18,000,000 South Americans who were struggling to break their chains and be free; nor when, in 1823, James Monroe, in his seventh annual message to Congress, laid down certain principles to govern relations between the United States and European nations in matters affecting the American continent."

Statesmanship is Traced

Dr.

Statesmanship is Traced Dr. Butler traced the course of American statemanship and American American statemanship and American history to the German invasion of Belgium, America's entry into the war and its conclusion, up to July 10, 1921, the date of President Harding's invitation to the leading world nations for a disarmament conference, pointing out that throughout history and to the present moment America had never
